

STORIES HOUSES TELL

By WILLIAM
LEWIS

"Last Night Here" by J. D. Smith

"I'll have to go out to get some more of the things I need," I thought, as I looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock, and I had to go to bed. I had a long day's work, and I was tired.

As I went to the door, I saw a shadow in the corner of the room. I looked at it, and it disappeared. I went back to bed, and I fell asleep. In the morning, I woke up, and I found a note pinned to the door. It was from the man who had been in the room the night before. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything.

"I'll have to go out to get some more of the things I need," I thought, as I looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock, and I had to go to bed. I had a long day's work, and I was tired. As I went to the door, I saw a shadow in the corner of the room. I looked at it, and it disappeared. I went back to bed, and I fell asleep. In the morning, I woke up, and I found a note pinned to the door. It was from the man who had been in the room the night before. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything.

"I'll have to go out to get some more of the things I need," I thought, as I looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock, and I had to go to bed. I had a long day's work, and I was tired. As I went to the door, I saw a shadow in the corner of the room. I looked at it, and it disappeared. I went back to bed, and I fell asleep. In the morning, I woke up, and I found a note pinned to the door. It was from the man who had been in the room the night before. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything.

Remains of The Fall

The story continues with a description of the remains of the fall, and the author's thoughts on the subject. The text is somewhat repetitive and appears to be a continuation of the previous story.

"I'll have to go out to get some more of the things I need," I thought, as I looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock, and I had to go to bed. I had a long day's work, and I was tired. As I went to the door, I saw a shadow in the corner of the room. I looked at it, and it disappeared. I went back to bed, and I fell asleep. In the morning, I woke up, and I found a note pinned to the door. It was from the man who had been in the room the night before. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything.

"I'll have to go out to get some more of the things I need," I thought, as I looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock, and I had to go to bed. I had a long day's work, and I was tired. As I went to the door, I saw a shadow in the corner of the room. I looked at it, and it disappeared. I went back to bed, and I fell asleep. In the morning, I woke up, and I found a note pinned to the door. It was from the man who had been in the room the night before. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything.

"I'll have to go out to get some more of the things I need," I thought, as I looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock, and I had to go to bed. I had a long day's work, and I was tired. As I went to the door, I saw a shadow in the corner of the room. I looked at it, and it disappeared. I went back to bed, and I fell asleep. In the morning, I woke up, and I found a note pinned to the door. It was from the man who had been in the room the night before. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything. He had said that he had seen a shadow in the corner of the room, and he had been afraid. He had called the police, and they had come, but they had not found anything.

Remains of The Fall

The story continues with a description of the remains of the fall, and the author's thoughts on the subject. The text is somewhat repetitive and appears to be a continuation of the previous story.

The story concludes with a final reflection on the events described in the previous pages. The author's tone is somber and reflective, suggesting a sense of loss and the passage of time.

ESCAPE TO LOVE